Deepening Wisdom, 2023 Betsey Downing, Ph.D.

Basic Model of Non-Violent Communication:

- Observations: concrete actions we observe that affects our well- being; with no evaluation included
- Feelings: how we feel in relation to what we observe; distinguish "true" feelings from false feelings; also distinguish feelings from thoughts
- Needs: the needs, values, desires that create our feelings
- Requests: the concrete action we request in order to enrich our lives; requests are positive, specific, and flexible; a request is suggestion on how to move forward, with openness to other ideas.

Basic wording: (Before you begin, pause and take a breath: lead with Presence) When I see that _____

I feel (or I'm) _____

Because I want (need, desire, value) to have _____?

Alternate wording: with the feeling first :
I'm (state the feeling)	_
To see that/ When I see that

Because I want (need, desire, value) to have ______?

Example #1:

I'm disappointed

(to see) that you did not give me the reports on Tuesday, as you said you would.

Because I have a need to trust that I can count on you to do what you say you will do. Would you be willing to bring me the reports by Friday?

Example #2:

When I heard music coming from your apartment last night around eleven, I got pretty frustrated. My ear plugs didn't help.

I work early and need to get a good night's rest. Would you be willing to turn the music down or use headphones after ten on weeknights?

Adapted from Nonviolent Communication by Marshall B. Rosenberg and Say What You Mean by Oren Jay Sofer

Write your own example(s):

When I see
Because I want (need, desire, value) to have Would you be willing to
Alternate wording: with the feeling first:
I'm (state the feeling) To see that/ When I see that
Because I want (need, desire, value) to have Would you be willing to	